Bank robbed at gunpoint

Two armed men robbed the US Bank branch at Jefferson Blvd. and Merkley Ave. in West Sacramento Tuesday morning, escaping with an undisclosed amount of cash.

Few details were available from police at press time.

But a witness who was a customer at the time of the robbery reported that the men entered the bank at about 10:30 a.m. and displayed what looked like "Uzi" machine pistols, ordering everyone to the floor and threatening to start shooting people if employees did not produce the keys to the vault.

The men, who appeared to be African-American, said the witness, were well-concealed by heavy winter clothing including ski masks.

While the robbery was in progress, one female customer came to the bank's glass doors and was about to enter when she saw what was happening inside and tried to retreat. One of the robbers grabbed her and pulled her inside.

Shortly afterwards, a man approached the door, saw what was happening inside, and fled across the street to call the police.

The robbers saw this occur, said the witness, and one told the other to "hurry up, hurry up, there's people outside."

No one was injured during the robbery, which was over in several minutes.

It was unknown whether the pair fled in a vehicle, although one policeman suggested that the suspects may have had a car parked nearby on the U.S. 50 freeway onramp for their escape.

Tribe foreclosing on marina land

■ Lighthouse development project appears poised to let go of marina land and to create a 'gated' community in order to become marketable

By Steve Marschke

The Cook Inlet Region, Inc. -- a corporation affiliated with a Native American tribe in Alaska -- has begun foreclosure proceedings against West Sacramento's Lighthouse development project over several acres the project had purchased in 1992.

Lighthouse had bought the property for $3.1 million in 1992, and had planned on constructing a Sacramento riverfront marina on it as part of an upscale housing project in the city's Broderick (northeastern) neighborhood.

Citing the recession and financial constraints, the developer convinced West Sacramento to drop the requirement that Lighthouse build the marina as part of a development agreement in 1995. To date, one builder has built one home in the housing project, and that home has not sold, said Val Toppenberg, director of the city's redevelopment agency.

The foreclosure proceedings add little new to the equation, said Toppenberg.

"Instead of Lighthouse owning the property and building the marina, Cook Inlet will own it," he commented. "The land is still zoned for a marina, and whoever owns it will have to build a marina or deal with the zoning."

Peter Corollo, the project manager for Lighthouse, could not be reached for comment.

The project's general partner is listed as Pacicon America, a Japanese-owned firm.

Toppenberg said a city financial analysis agreed with Lighthouse last year when the company said it could not afford to build a marina under the deadlines imposed by the development agreement signed with the city.

"They could no longer do it because of the recession. (Boat) slip rental rates had gone down and construction costs had gone up."

Toppenberg added that the

City/county social service center opens

With pomp and circumstance, city and county officials gathered in the hundreds on Thursday to dedicate a new city of West Sacramento/county of Yolo social services center on Triangle Court.

County supervisors' chairman Tom Stallard presided, over an event that included Congressman Vic Fazio and countless county, city, and state officials as well as Congressman Vic Fazio.

The new center, located near Jefferson Blvd. and between Sacramento Ave. and West Capitol Ave., are now home to the county's Department of Social Services, the Community Partnership Agency/GAIN Program, the Salud Clinic, the county departments of public health and mental health, and other social programs. The departments come together from previous locations at the Riverbend Plaza, Country West Shopping Center and the old "Washington School" site at 3rd and C streets.

West Sacramento's new police station is moving into new headquarters nearby, having long outgrown the old sheriff's substation in the city's northeast.

Total costs for the 44,000 square foot purchase and conversion of existing buildings was $7.8 million, paid for with city and county funds (the county will pay rent to the city for rent at the facilities).

Over 160 employees are based at the center.

West Sac native to be subject of photograph exhibition

From the Yolo County Historical Museum

(News-Ledger editor Steve Marschke contributed to this report.)

An exhibition of photographs from "The Great Central Valley Project" by Robert Dawson is on display at the Yolo County Historical Museum until May 1. The exhibit features 21 prints in Ektacolor and black and white gelatin silver prints.

Dawson, 45, will be at the museum on Sunday afternoon, February 25, at 12:30 p.m., to meet with visitors and talk informally about his work. At 2 p.m., he will present an illustrated talk at the Gibson School Multipurpose Room, 312 Gibson Road, Woodland. His talk will be hosted by the Museum Board of Directors in cooperation with the Yolo County Historical Society. The public is invited. Refreshments will be served at the school.

The photographer grew up in West Sacramento, graduating from James Marshall High School in 1968.

"Spillway, Lake Berryessa" (1986) shows Dawson's fascination with water -- and with man's relationship to it.

Robert Dawson

While in high school, he found mentors in the parents of a best friend, John and Grace Ohlson, and in the late Spanish teacher Dr. Ted Seamans and his wife, Virginia.

Dawson received a great deal of encouragement from the Ohlson and Seamans households, he said.

He then attended UC Santa Cruz, and received a M.A. from San Francisco State University. He currently teaches at San Jose State and Stanford Universities and lives in San Francisco with his wife Ellen Manchester (a private school administrator and a photographer herself), and their son Walker, age 6.

Dawson said he had a background in music while in high school, and studied psychology in college in college.

"I would up being interested in the psychology of why people are creative, and after spending four years studying this, I decided I would rather be creative myself," he commented.

While in graduate school, he made the transition from science to art.

"I did a project at a mental hospital using photography as psychotherapy," he said. "It was kind of a way of ending

West Sacramento youth sought in Sacto murder

Sacramento police are seeking a 16-year old West Sacramento youth as a suspect in the slaying Sunday of a Sacramento man, but have not released the suspect's name.

Victim James Wilson Mull, 47, was discovered dead at about 6:30 p.m. Sunday when his roommate, a Grant School District Police Officer, returned to their 6th Ave. home from work.

Mull had been shot several times. There were no signs of forced entry.

Sacramento police say the 16-year old suspect, who was known to the victim, is being considered armed and dangerous, and that the crime "was not a random act of violence."

They have not commented further on a possible motive.

Planners to take another look at Southport store

Cheaper is back, with a planning commission scheduled for March 7 to discuss plans to build a gas station/discount grocery store at Linden Rd.'s southern intersection with Jefferson Blvd.

The Customer Company, which owns Cheaper stores (including one on West Capitol Ave. in West Sacramento) has clashed with the city over the planned project's impacts on local roadways -- particularly the Jefferson Blvd. two-lane bridge over the barge canal.

A new study commissioned by the company and performed by Omni Means Associates concludes that the new store will draw most of its customers from nearby neighborhoods, and will have no effect on bridge traffic.

The planning commission will have a chance to review that claim on March 7, as well as to review the company's conditional use permit application to sell hard liquor at the site.

City planner Steve Rikala said his department has not yet completed its recommendation to the planning commission on Cheaper's plans, but that the traffic consultant hired by the company has been responsive to the city's questions. He noted, however, that the consultant was retained directly by the company, instead of being commissioned by the city with money reimbursed by the company, as is the city's usual policy.

While Rikala said he does not presently have any complaints about the consultant's work, its hiring directly by the applicant

An enemy in Smoot Castle

"T.J. Smoot" is the pen-name of a neighbor of yours. His musings appear every other week in this space.

(Scene: 12:08 a.m. one Thursday morning in Smoot castle. Two-year-old princess Smoot, unable to sleep because of a stuffy nose, lies in her daddy's arms while the blue light of the television flickers against the pair.) "Finally asleep," he thinks as he gently stands up, carries the little bundle to her bed and quietly tucks her in. Unable to resist the bluish hue, he sneaks back to the warmed spot in front of the T.V. and places the quilt over him while watching some inane, mind-numbing program. Suddenly, he feels something like a spider crawling up his covered left foot. With cheetah-like speed, he leaps up from underneath the covers and pats down the quilt, looking for the culprit.

Out jets a minute, outside-dwelling (usually), sneaky entity (m.o.u.s.e.). It disappears into the darkened room. He spends the next 20 minutes dismantling the livingroom looking for this individual. "I hate living next to vacant land!" grunts King Smoot as he lifts up the couch with one hand while holding the broom in the other. No intruder is to be found. That night he sleeps fitfully, dreaming of a m.o.u.s.e. nibbling at his left foot.

(Scene: Smoot Castle. 10:45 p.m. that evening. King and Queen Smoot recline on the futon watching "ER." They see Dr. Susan's apartment in downtown Chicago. She sits on the couch next to Dr. Mark while wearing a Chicago Bear's jersey, number 51. They're discussing the gossip around the ER that they're an "item.") "Everyone's assuming we're having a 'torrid' affair," Susan says, sipping her margarita.

"What makes you think it would be 'torrid?'" Mark replies ponderously.

"Oh, I don't know. I just assumed it would be 'torrid.'" They lock eyes for a few tense seconds.

"I'm sure it would be," he awkwardly eeps.

"Uh...."

"I know what you mean, Susan."

She peered into her margarita. "I think this needs more lime." And she gets up.

SNAP!!

King and Queen Smoot lock eyes for a few tense seconds, each knowing exactly what the other was thinking.

(Scene : Smoot Castle. 10:59 p.m. that same night. The Royal Smoots just finished watching ER.) King Smoot stretches his arms over his head and looks at the misses." What about the snap?" he wonders out loud.

"Do you want me to get it?" she offers, getting up. The mesmerizing box catches his attention, and he may have grunted a response, but he doesn't remember if he had or not. Newscasts about the flooding in Portland spread across the screen, and he is comforted to know that thousands of empty sandbags are being flown up to Oregon to stem the tide of the flood. Soon Queen Smoot walks in holding a tiny, oversized, closepin-type of device. Dangling from it was most of the m.o.u.s.e. The rest was hidden inside the clip. "Don't bring it in here!" he cries out in (macho) disgusted surprise.

She gleefully replies, "Oh, you don't want it in here?" His nose twitches, and he shudders while vividly remembering the crawling encounter the night before. He follows her and the (now swinging) m.o.u.s.e. into the lighted kitchen where the snap originally took place. "I think it's incontinent," she says clinically, holding it out at a safe distance. "Look."

He inspects its underside, and it appears that it had, in fact, embarrassed itself. Still unsure if this was a ploy of some type on the m.o.u.s.e.'s part, King Smoot rechecks the victim. It sways gently. "Do you think it's dead?" he offers.

"Sure. Just look at it," she replies and wiggles it until it sways some more. "It's broken."

"It could be faking," he wonders out loud.

"I don't think so. It's not moving. It's broken." Queen Smoot frugally offers to drop the m.o.u.s.e. into the trash and wash the snapper, but he doesn't want it to get away, just in case it was faking. It is a very convincing sway. Still, he isn't taking any chances.

"Nah, just throw the whole thing in the trash. Who's going to clean up the mess?" He turns to watch Queen Smoot leave the kitchen.

"Oh brother. Not me. I picked him up. It's your turn," and she disappears into the hallway. Peeking around the back of the refrigerator where the snap occurred, he squeaks, "Rats."

Look for it around town: new display celebrates what's old about West Sac

From the West Sacramento Historical Society

The West Sacramento Historical Society is presenting "Today's City in Retrospect," an exhibition of photographs of the early days of West Sacramento from private collections. The photographs will be displayed at La Bou, 849 Jefferson Blvd., from February through March 31, 1996. After these dates, the exhibition will tour various businesses and establishments in West Sacramento. Future dates and sites for the show will be publicized. The exhibition was made possible by a grant from the City of West Sacramento.

"This exhibition has given me such a sense of nostalgia and a historical perspective of West Sacramento, states Greg Potnick, Mayor of West Sacramento and a lifetime member of the West Sacramento Historical Society. "It's such a noteworthy collection of photographs. It's very impressive. I was drawn to a saying that has been around for a long, long time: 'You don't know where you're going until you've known where you've been!' I've been around this community all my life and it's a real kind of nostalgia thinking about the past of West Sacramento and what this community is composed of and how far it's come and how far we yet have to go."

There are photos of the largest popsicle factory in Northern California owned by Maxwell Hughes; a photograph of "Old Mary" which was the fire engine built by volunteers out of wood and another photograph of the Russian Orchestra which played in the 1930's at Petrushka's. Visitors will view early fishermen on Lake Washington dressed in fine clothes as if they were going to church or some other function.

Many individuals contributed or assisted in the exhibition: Thom Lewis, curator for the exhibition, created and designed the show. Thirty-two photographs from private collections are illustrated. In preparation for the exhibition, Jeri Hughes-Wingfield and Una Hughes Reason of the society collaborated with Dan Harris, graphic artist for the city of West Sacramento, to duplicate (in both print and slide form) over 100 historical photographs. The photographs depict agriculture, housing, businesses, individuals, churches and other scenes of West Sacramento from the 1850's to 1955.

Other individuals lending photographs or providing historical documentation are Bryan Turner, Bobby Hammon, Alma Bernabovi Soost, Lana Paulhamus, Mike Garten, Louisa and Louise Vessell, Wilbur and Gloria (Schaffnit) Curtis, Mrs. Kelly Perini, Joanne Fausett, Ben and John Anatur, Clara Hoxie, Fred Marty, Dino Beltrami, Connie Johnson, Marino Perucci, Yolanda Nicoletti, Sarah Jane Vierra, and Kathy Perrigo.

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The Sacramento Kings (24-24) lost to the two-time defending NBA champion Houston Rockets 118-111 in overtime, and are at .500 for the first time this season.

The defeat was the Kings' seventh loss in a row. The Kings are involved in many trade rumors with the NBA trade deadline coming up this Thursday.

The Kings need another point guard who can score and play some defense.

Hurley and Edney are too small and very inconsistent in their scoring. The ideal trade would be to send Hurley and Lionel Simmons and their long-term contracts to Golden State for Tim Hardaway, who hates his coach and is very unhappy with his playing time with the Warriors.

Other guards who are on the market are Boston's Dee Brown and Houston's Kenny Smith. Another rumor has native Sacramentan Kevin Johnson coming to the Kings. The Kings can still make it to the playoffs, but they must pull the trigger on a trade before it's too late.

The Kings return home on Friday to play against David Robinson and the San Antonio Spurs.

The NFL's free agents are starting to make their moves. The Oakland Raiders are ready to sign Super Bowl MVP Larry Brown to a multi-year contract and the 49ers signed free-agent defensive end Roy Barker to a four-year, $7 million contract. The Niners are also looking at San Diego's pass rusher, Leslie O'Neal.

The Steelers' QB Neil O'Donnell is considering playing for the Jets! Can you imagine playing in the Super Bowl, and then next season playing for the New York Jets?!

It's got to be the $$$.

See ya next week!!

Dolphin team coaches to return

At their February Board Meeting, the West Sacramento Dolphins Swim Team announced their coaching staff for the upcoming 1996 swim season.

Returning for her second season as head coach will be Amy Hanrahan. Amy, in her first season as head coach, was responsible for dramatically improving all swimmers' techniques as well as their meet times.

Assisting Amy will be former Dolphins head coach Scott Morgan. Beside coaching the Dolphins for three years, Scott was also a coach for the Los Altos Aquatic Club for three years, as well as being a former All-American at Chico State.

The Dolphins are very excited about the upcoming season, as Amy and Scoot will not only teach the Dolphins to swim competively, but have fun while doing it.

News-Ledger Editorial

Back to the basics

West Sacramento incorporated in 1987, and in the nearly ten years since that time, victories have been rarer than disappointments.

People voted for incorporation for two main reasons.

Some saw the need to keep the region's tax dollars local, feeling they were not being well-spent by county government based in Woodland.

Cityhood would bring a local police force, local firefighters, the ability to do something about West Sacramento's blight and improve basic services, they felt.

Others had ambitions that went beyond these basic services, hoping that cityhood could lead the way for grand new developments that would change the face of the city, making it the oft-quoted "jewel of the region" and the "premier city of the Sacramento Valley."

Public opinion is split on how well we have done on the city service issue, but there is little doubt that the road to these grand new developments, often pursued with thousands of valuable hours of city staff time and millions of dollars of public money, have thus far been disappointing.

True, several pretty good plans have been set for future development -- such as the "Triangle Plan" for the downtown riverfront, and the West Capitol area action plan for that street's eventual upgrade. But the recession and mistakes have postponed or killed other potential "gems" of the city.

Raley's Landing remains bare land, awaiting the first bulldozer for a single major riverfront tenant.

Lighthouse Marina no longer plans a marina, and has yet to sell a house. Instead, it looks like its destined to be a gated community within Broderick -- one which must insulate itself from its neighbors in order to salvage a financial future.

Some time ago, the city's leadership learned a lesson about project priorities, learning the hard way that they can't do everything at once, and that if they try, they will end up accomplishing nothing. So they narrowed their project lists to a small focus group of priorities, and regrouped.

As the town continues to struggle toward its future, they may want to make another move in that direction, weighing the costs and benefits of our early struggle towards things that were big and shiny and new.

Most of the city's 30,000-or-so residents continue to look not towards grandiose and spectacular new developments, but to the everyday things that matter to them the most: less crime, cleaner streets, better schools, and a city that looks and feels more like a home.

Perhaps that ought to be the focus of our staffs for the next few years; trying to win victories on a smaller level and spending less effort on the grandiose, costly, risky ventures that were ahead of their time.

Letters to the Editor

Cache Creek

The following is an open letter to Tom Stallard, chair, and members of the Yolo County Board of Supervisors:

Yolo County is blessed with prime agricultural land and water from Cache Creek aquifers that is pure enough to drink without filtration treatment.

Now -- we are concerned about proposals that may change this. Gravel mining companies are applying for long-term permits that will last 30 years and the opportunity to renew for 20 more. The mining proposed will be off-channel along Cache Creek in 55 deep pits that range in depth from 29 to 150 feet. They will extract 5.5 million tons annually, double the amount mined in 1993-94.

Mining this deep, is mining into the water table. Open water, in pits exposes the aquifer to many types of pollution such as debris, toxins, viruses, and algae blooms.

These applications are moving forward before an Environmental Impact Report (EIR) has been prepared for the Off-Channel Mining Plan and the Long Term Ordinance and Reclamation Plans. Because we don't have these EIR reports that County does not know what is the safest and best way to allow gravel extraction.

The threat to water quality is not the only problem. We are already a non attainment area for air quality. The more than 1100 truck trips per day will further degrade air quality and create traffic dangers, noise, and road maintenance problems.

There is a need for serious consideration of the 30 to 50 year time frames. State contracts are not let out for more than five years because of uncertain economic conditions and policy changes. Likewise, the County should not lose pricing regulation, authority, and control.

When mining is completed, less than half of the area will be restored to agricultural uses. The remainder will be wet pits, slopes, habitat, and haul roads.

We question whether this depth or quantify of mining in wet pits for so long a time is in the best interests of Yolo County. Is it preserving natural resources for future generations?

We urge the Board of Supervisors to address the problems of mining into the underground water table, work toward improved air quality, and provide an economic and environmental gain for all of Yolo County.

Board in the dark

Again, I find myself compelled to write about my ever-increasing concern over the flawed process surrounding the proposed Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) between the Washington Unified School District and the City of West Sacramento/Southport Developers that was first presented to the Board of Education at the January 23 meeting.

At that meeting the Superintendent presented and recommended to the Board of Education that they approve the MOU as written. The Board was told that it is very urgent that they approve the MOU, their approval is necessary to the City of West Sacramento can obtain Federal funding necessary for the construction of the Palamidessi Bridge which will span the port's barge canal between Southport and Industrial Blvd. The Superintendent said that without this MOU agreement the bridge could not be built and without the bridge residential/industrial development could and would not take place in Southport.

The Board of Education was put in an extremely uncomfortable and awkward position by the Superintendent for the following reasons:

The Board of Education and City of West Sacramento/Southport Developers or City Counsel had never met to discuss the far reaching content of the MOU.

The Board of Education was never brought into any detailed information loop, or the negotiation process, that was taking place between the Superintendent and the City of West Sacramento/Southport Developers.

The Board of Education was not adequately briefed on this topic by the Superintendent, therefore they were not properly prepared by the Superintendent to make an informed decision on whether to approve the MOU in the form as presented.

As outlined in the MOU the developers are to pay the school district $5000 and the City is to pay an additional $3,000 (combined total of $8,000) for each house that is built. This money in turn will be used by the School District to construct new schools as a result of the increased student population that these new developments will generate.

Board members had many questions concerning the MOU that evening on January 23. For instance:

How many students are projected to be generated from the Gateway and Gainsborough residential projects?

How many schools will be required as a result of this development?

How much will these schools cost to construct and when will they be needed?

Will the $8,000 dollars, for every house built, that is to be paid to the School District from the City of West Sacramento/Southport Developers, be enough to pay for these schools?

Where will the additional money come from if the $8,000 fee per house is not enough to fully pay for the construction of adequate school facilities to house this student population?

Does the State of California have school facilities construction funds? If not, will the burden fall to the citizens of West Sacramento in the form of a school bond measure and resulting increase to their property tax bill?

The Board of Education should have never been put in this position. All of these questions should have been previously addressed, but they were not. The Board therefore scheduled an additional meeting for the following week, January 30, to continue the matter.

At the initial meeting on January 23 and again on January 30, Superintendent David Miller continued to tell the board that this was a very favorable agreement for the School District and one of the best, if not the best agreements reached between a school district and developers in the State of California.

At the January 30 meeting it was learned that it will cost approximately $12,000 for each student generated from these developments to construct an elementary school. The cost increases per student for the construction of larger and costlier middle schools and high schools. Therefore the $8,000 that the School District would receive for each house constructed would not be enough money to fully fund the construction of school facilities. Where will the additional money come from?

In the meantime I have learned within the week that one of our neighboring school districts right here in Yolo County, Winters Unified School District, is receiving $11,000 per house for school construction. This amount is paid for in full, by the developers at the time the intimal building permit is issued by the city building department. $11,000 goes a long way toward fully funding the construction of new schools.

Unlike Winters Unified there will be a significant short-fall in construction funding for new schools built within the Washington Unified School District if the MOU for $8,000 per house is accepted.

Are the citizens of West Sacramento ready and willing to pay that difference or should we continue in an attempt to get a better a more cost effective developer fee agreement such as Winters Unified did?

Fair play at port

This industrial bridge/project being built -- with some Taxpayers' money, i.e. Congressman Fazio's $8.5 million dollar funding -- to serve one of the two industrial properties -- the Port of Sacramento -- is tainted by the Longshoremen's Union's corrupt and greedy practices in our port which has and will continue to deprive our community of employment opportunities/jobs. (Congress allocated $50 million of your hard-earned tax dollars to the Port in May of 1989).

Before our city makes any deals with this port we should first demand that the following be done to create more jobs for our Community:

1) The publication of longshore jobs in our port to the general public;

2) No more union longshoremen from other ports -- San Francisco, Los Angeles, Eureka, etc. -- working in our port; if you need more longshoremen, then hire local people;

3) No more doubling-tripling back whereby union longshoremen take two or three eight-hour paid shifts in a single 24 hour period by working four hours on and four hours off of each eight-hour paid shift in violation of their own contract; it should be eight hours pay-starting pay is $16.20 up to $34 per hour -- for eight hours work. Union longshoremen are also guaranteed up to 38 hours of pay per week when there is no work in our port;

4) No more payroll padding.

There is no such thing as being just a little corrupt or a little greedy, because in the long run, any corruption or greed affects our community as a whole.

Therefore, our city should not enter into this agreement with the Port of Sacramento until this corruption and greed is eliminated in our port.

Or close this port, and let the Taxpayers free themselves from this debt-ridden port-last count the port was in debt to the tune of $16 million dollars.

S.I.P. worth it?

On February 14 the City Council okayed special financing for Southport Industrial Park's infrastructure costs...something like interest-free bonds "not to exceed $32.5 million." Of course, the fringe benefits to city residents are supposed to be "more than worth it."

This raises questions such as: 1) Is this another Lighthouse? 2) Is it not ironic that West Sacramento's city money is allegedly so tight we must postpone indefinitely many repair projects like those needed at Welcome Grove on West Capitol Ave.? 3) The underpass' repair costs in (2) are estimated to be $300,000.00, or less than 1% on above potential financing, but again, why waste that money when we know a new and bigger underpass is just around the corner?...why don't we loan the same bonding money to developers of our east side and let them build the new, larger underpass (like the one at Reed Ave. in our Bryte area)? 4) Does our City have any kind of limits

(Regarding the cemetery discussion triggered by T.J. Smoot's column two weeks ago:)

Let's talk about a retirement residence for the living in West Sacramento!

We shouldn't have to go (to Sacramento or Davis) to live our declining years. To me, this is more important than a cemetery.

There are lots of alternatives to cemeteries. You can give your body to the school of anatomy at Davis.

We need a champagne quality living place for a beer price in West Sacramento!

Discussion on bridge financing, port deal will be moved to Feb. 28

The major elements of the discussion of a new financing agreement to build a second bridge over the barge canal and other improvements have been moved from a scheduled city council meeting tonight to a special meeting on Feb. 28.

The formation of tax districts to include the Southport Industrial Park and the Gainsborough and Gateway residential projects will be a part of that Feb. 28 meeting, said a city spokesman Tuesday.

Also bumped from Feb. 21 to Feb. 28 will be the city council's discussion of a development agreement concerning the Port of Sacramento's Seaway project.

insofar as things like "total bonded indebtedness" or cash flow problems and if so, to what degree would this latest move tie our hands and thus prevent us from assisting other potential developers who may provide more jobs -- and higher paying jobs -- and real estate improvement with more local revenues? Let's hope this latest SIP move does not overload us with warehouse-type jobs that our leaders don't think are worth providing public transit for.

Maybe we need some charts showing what we have done so far versus what our capacity is to do (financially), the difference being what we have for future financially assistance for developers, etc. We should also factor in cash flow items so that in time we can see that (if) payoff of any part of earlier obligations increase our capacity as a city to finance future projects. Charts could also be useful -- very useful -- to list what our city still needs for us to become a "complete city," with periodic updates. Such action would provide public with a more meaningful financial, business, and social overall picture. (Our projected completion dates for various projects at City Hall is a step in the right direction.)

Congratulations to our various county departments for relocating all West Sac offices to 500 Jefferson Blvd. The remodeling was impressive and we hope Social Security and one or more eateries will join them soon.

RCHS play 'The Nerd' starts March 7

Classic comedy with a twist comes your way in March, with the two-week scheduled run of "The Nerd" at the Erza K. Matthews Performing Arts Center at Yolo High School in West Sacramento. Performed by the Drama Department of River City High School, together with Thespian Troupe 3129, "The Nerd" opens March 7 and runs every evening from March 7-9 and March 14-16.

A party for the cast and crew will be held following the March 15 performance, and tickets for that performance will be available only through the Arts Booster Club.

"The Nerd," by playwright Larry Shue, is a tightly directed rib-tickler that centers on the debt of honor owed by Willum, a young architect and Vietnam vet, to Rick, a stranger and a fellow GI who saved Willum's life. Rick shows up at Willum's Terre Haute, IN home to take Willum up on his grateful offer to "do anything" for Rick, a promise that Willum comes to regret in a manner which is sure to delight the audience.

Directed by River City High School veteran Roy Engoron, "The Nerd" features Moses Cushing as Rick and Tony R. Vendetti as Willum. Patricia Huckabay appears as Tansy, Brian Kinney plays the part of Axel, Christian Tillmanns is Walgrove, Sarah Templin plays Clelia and Scott Hampton is Thor.

Clarksburg wine group harvests Wilson as prez

From the Clarksburg Wine Growers Association

Ken Wilson has been elected president of the Clarksburg Wine Growers Association, effective January 1, 1996. He will serve a two-year term.

Wilson is vice president and owner/manager of vineyard operations for Wilson Farms, located outside of Clarksburg. As president of CWGA, his goal is "to continue to build upon the momentum we now have in the association. I'd like to see increased interest from wineries in purchasing fruit and increased vineyard development in Clarksburg." Wilson explains that CWGA is concentrating its efforts on more widely marketing Clarksburg grapes. "Now's the time to be targeting more wineries and introducing them to our appellation. We're doing so through increased mailings and by talking directly with the wineries. There's going to be more and more interest in Clarksburg grapes," he emphasizes. "Wineries are very interested in attending our functions. They are coming to meet our growers and to learn about and understand the growing situation for Clarksburg vineyards."

Prior to being elected president of CWGA, Wilson served as treasurer of the association for two years. He is vice moderator of Clarksburg Community Church, a member of West Sacramento Rotary, and past president of Friends of Clarksburg Youth.

The Clarksburg Wine Growers Association was established in 1987 to promote the grapes of the Clarksburg Appellation. There are approximately 5,500 acres of wine grapes grown in the appellation.

project was now pursuing turning the development into a walled and gated community in order to make it more marketable. This will require privatization of some city streets within the development, a proposal expected to come back for city approval later this year.

Neighboring land includes both modest homes and some blighted properties. Some properties and low income housing were uprooted and replaced as part of the public-private efforts which went into making the Lighthouse project possible.

my involvement in psychology. I made the switch (to photography) and never looked back."

Dawson teamed with fellow photographer, Stephen Johnson, and writer, Gerald Haslam, to produce the book The Great Central Valley. The book focuses on California's agricultural heartland and the changes this region has undergone in the last 150 years. Published in 1993 by UC Press it was listed as one of the eight best photography books of the year by the New York Times Book Review. It is available in the museum's gift shop.

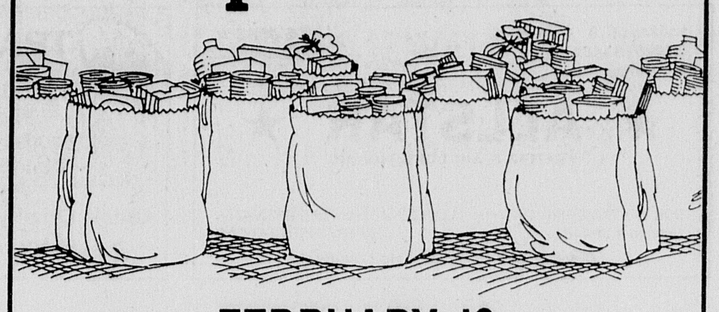

He is working on a new book which provides an in-depth look at "state environmental issues and at the people who are actively involved in working on them, through activities like creek restoration and stream restoration," Dawson reports. "I think of my own work as kind of on the edge of a documentary style and a personal art style."

Dawson's work shows his fascination with water -- a "key to life here in the west," he says -- and with the relationship between people and the environment.

The recipient of numerous awards and fellowships, he has exhibited and published weekly. His work is included in the permanent collections of the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the Library of Congress, and the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art. He has served several national photographic organizations including the San Francisco Camerawork.

does raise the question of "how objective it can be," he said Tuesday.

To comply with a city general plan policy, the store must prove it will not add traffic problems to Jefferson Blvd. when it is built, since there is still no second barge canal crossing built to back up the Jefferson bridge.

Neighborhood activists in Southport fought the company last time it was in front of the city council and planning commission. The company was granted a permit by the planning commission, but that permit was overturned on appeal by the city council, which demanded more traffic data.

Critics attacked not only the traffic issue, but also the stores aesthetics, its sales of liquor, its alleged attractiveness to crime and other issues.

Company officials maintain that the store -- a 3,000 square foot discount grocery -- will not attract crime and will resemble its higher-class new "super-Cheaper" stores such as one in Woodland.

They bristle at any characterization of their stores as "convenience markets," preferring to characterize them as "discount grocery stores."

Evidence being analyzed in last week's assault

Police are sifting through evidence in last week's daylight robbery and double-sexual assault at a West Capitol Ave. manicurists' salon.

An man armed with a revolver stole money and assaulted both a female customer and a female employee Feb. 12, then fled after about a half-hour at the location -- the Nail Salon on the 2300 block of West Capitol.

Detective Dave Duckett of the West Sacramento Police Dept. said witnesses are now looking through photo lineups and the state Dept. of Justice is analyzing fingerprints found at the scene to see if any match with a possible suspect.

"We have several people that match the physical description who I feel could have done this," he said.
